Encountering Christ through brotherhood

By Amelia Watts

With only three weeks to plan, nine retreat team members and six Marist adults pulled together a group of 26 junior men to successfully run the Fall Men's Encounter at St. Benedict's Lodge last weekend.

Attendees left early Saturday morning and came back Monday afternoon. Activities on the Fall Men's Encounter included multiple small group sharing, free time and plenty of time for reflection.

The purpose of the Encounter is to "help Marist students encounter God, self, and others in a meaningful way" said principal Andy Oldham, who moderated last weekend's Encounter.

This was the first Encounter that was fully in-person since 2020, and hardly anything about this Encounter was modified, aside from distancing and masks.

"I got to know a lot of people, and I also got to know myself," said junior candidate Jofre Castell-Mir. "Being new to Marist, this experience was really meaningful".

"Leading an Encounter has taught me that the Marist community is committed to being involved in their faith and growing relationships with their peers," said Kellen Burggren, who co-rectored this Encounter alongside Duncan Yozzo.

Oldham hopes that "[the attendees] walk away feeling loved, by their community, God, and other people"

The Fall Women's Encounter is happening from Nov. 20-22. The deadline to sign up is Friday Nov. 5. Go to the Campus Ministry Office for a sign-up form.

NATIONAL HONORS SOCIETY SIGNS IN

By Rachel McConaghie

On Wednesday evening, 35 Marist students gathered in the gym and took a pledge to uphold the high standards of the National Honor Society. These inductees have demonstrated exemplary academic achievement and service commitment upon membership. "NHS membership at Marist will serve to complement and reinforce the core values of our school," said interim principal Andrew Oldham. Inductees were called up to inscribe their name into the Marist NHS Chapter book. Oldham instructed the new members saying, "At Marist NHS is more than recognition of a certain GPA, it's about being a scholar and striving for excellence in academics ... it is about striving to live out the motto We Are One.

TAPE IT UP A NOTCH

Students bring their creativity to life using an interesting medium – tape

Marist's tape dispensers are now empty. Over the past month, McCall Sherrod's sculpture classes created life-size tape figures that are now flying around the hallways and floating in the fountain.

Sherrod assigned the sculptures as a group project to "test students in being able to compromise and work with others who may have different ideas than them." One student in each group was a physical model, while the others had the responsibility of completely taping the model up, except for their head, to create a 3D form.

The hardest part was cutting the tape off of the people after wrapping their entire bodies. "Taping was very fun," said senior Anna Watts, "but also very tedious because we didn't want to cut her clothes."

While planning out the sculptures, Sherrod asked the students to think about what pose the sculpture was going to have and how it would relate to the space.

Seniors Sydney Clark, Anna Watts, Emilie Nelson and Chelsea Rustik designed a tape sculpture holding a red apple for economics teacher Mark Chronister's room. "We had been learning about the economic and personal significance that the apple has on Chronister, and wanted to make something to honor [an apple] and him," Watts said.

The sculptures have since been placed in the ARC, courtyard, fountain, hallways, and classrooms so that all students can see them, regardless of whether they are taking an art class or not. Sherrod would "love for [these sculptures] to be up as long as they can," as they have quickly become a part of Marist's landscape.
