Marist students celebrate a week of HOCO festivities

In a week of celebration before the Homecoming football game and dance, the Marist community participated in various themed dress up days.

A flashback from 2019, the week started off with VSCO vs. Emo where students showed off their grunge dark clothing for Emo or their colorful scrunchies and water bottles for VSCO.

On Tuesday, classes performed their self-choreographed dances for the rest of the school. This year, students voted to change the decades from previous years with seniors representing the 2000s, juniors the 90s, sophomores the 80s and freshmen in the 70s. The seniors' impressive stunts, funny skits and incredible dance moves earned them first place overall. The juniors were a close second, with the freshmen in third and the sophomores in fourth.

On Wednesday, students came into school with baggy shorts and oversized shirts in an effort to replicate actor Adam Sandler's most memorable outfits. During lunch the school held the club fair where Marist's extracurriculars were advertised in the courtyard.

To earn money for a new Spartan costume, Student Council hosted a bake sale. This was the first of various campaigns taking place throughout October with the purpose of raising funds to 'Save Sparty' as the original dress was tragically lost and the head in a state of disrepair.

On Thursday, Marist participated in Country vs. Country Club with some students sporting cowboy boots and flannel with others in polos and tennis skirts.

The Marist football team will go up against Cottage Grove on Friday night for the annual Homecoming game, with the theme for fans being white out. There will also be the crowning of Homecoming court at halftime.

Finally on Saturday night, Marist will be immersed in a "Night in New Orleans" at the 2022 Homecoming dance with music, decorations and mini donuts provided by Student Council.

Freshmen spend Saturday locked into community

By Elizabeth Tucker

Last Saturday, the 2023 Freshman Lock-In took place at school and was filled with lots of laughter and get-to-know-you activities created to bring the freshmen closer with a day full of fun and games to learn the meaning of our motto "We Are One."

Behind the scenes, many upperclassmen volunteered their Saturday to put on an exciting day to welcome the class of 2026 into the Marist community.

Students played interactive games like Leapfrog, Simon Says, "I Love Everyone Who ...," Rock, Paper, Scissors, and Ships and Sailors.

Along with the games, there was time for small group bonding. Towards the evening, the freshmen went to Mass in the cafeteria preached by Fr. David Brown. Before Mass began, the freshmen and their leaders sang rowdy songs taught by Proclaim!, Marist's liturgical choir, and a variety of retreat team leaders.

Following Mass, the freshmen had pizza and drinks in the courtyard and participated in the Lock-In dance with assistant principal Andrew Oldham as DJ. They ended the night with free-time to play basketball, volleyball, watch a movie and make videos.
