By Danielle Shojai

Last Saturday, Marist held its traditional annual Prom for juniors and seniors at the University of Oregon's Ford Alumni Center, which featured music, dancing, cupcakes and a whole lot of fun. The center was decorated with lights, banners, snacks and refreshments to coordinate with the theme of "Old Hollywood" which was chosen by Marist's Prom committee.

The Prom Court crowning was also an exciting part of the night. As they entered the venue, Prom attendees voted for the Prom King and Queen from the nominees that were picked by the senior class through an online survey.

By popular vote, Christian Noll and Chloe Lee were crowned Prom King and Queen in front of the elegantly-dressed crowd, and they enjoyed a slow dance together shortly after.

"I definitely felt really awkward standing up there. People were clapping and my friends were screaming. I will never forget it." Noll said.

The court included Nick Clark, Maegan Cary, Matthias Collins, Mia Graves, Brody LaFavor-Cary, Chloe Lee, Tess Louie and Christian Noll.

A CHAMPIONSHIP AUCTION

By Jaden Spencer

On Saturday, May 4, Marist hosted over 500 individuals for "The Championships," its 48th Annual Marist Auction which continues to be the longest running auction in the area. Even before the event began, the cost of running the auction had been covered by sponsors, so 100% of what was made on auction night goes to helping the school.

The auction is coordinated by the Advancement Department; more specifically Katie Underwood, the Alumni Relations and Event Coordinator, with the help of Marist parents and students. The volunteers sold Pick of the Auction necklaces, valet parked, served dinner, helped with the desert dash, took photos and cleaned up the following morning.

Prior to the auction students sold raffle tickets for a Mercedes car. Junior Amy Blanchard, who sold the most tickets, got to pick between a MacBook Air and $500 cash. She picked the computer. "Ask everyone you can think of to buy a ticket. You really never know who will be interested until you ask," Blanchard advised to student for next year's raffle.

Others who made the event possible were the co-chairs—Bob and Michelle Cross, Kyle and Kate Hudson and Byron and Andrea Penn—and of course long-time auctioneer Sid Voorhees and Rob Henry who announced the silent auction.

timony that highlighted how tuition assistance helps kids stay at Marist. The Bids Up that followed the video raised a lot of money that directly goes to tuition assistance, some individuals donating as much as $10,000.

Last Thursday, Marist students and teachers gathered in the sunny courtyard for the annual Founder's Day Mass to honor the people who have made our school what it is today. This year, the Marist Brothers were focused on as the founders of Marist Catholic High School and other high school and college campuses across the world. President Suzanne Graf spoke about how Founder's Day Mass also connects the current student body to the past and future students at Marist.

After communication, a selection of students placed flowers at the foot of the statue of Mary in the Grotto because May is the month of Mary.

Before the conclusion of the Mass, seniors Madison Wisnews-ki, Jason DePaoli, Cole Jones and Mia Graves spoke about their sophomore year trip to a Marist youth gathering at Marist College in Poughkeepsie, New York. Each spoke about the importance of community on the Marist campus today, the communities of the past, the Marist communities elsewhere and the Marist identity.

After the Mass, the Marist teachers and students were treated to a lunch of burgers and hot dogs.
