Celebrating a week of firsts: a new schedule, new students and a new school year

To start the new school year, Marist students celebrated the traditional Welcome Week by crowning heads, dunking faces and joining in prayer.

Students were treated to free doughnuts on Monday morning and seniors donned cardboard crowns to show their new status.

On Wednesday, the freshmen, transfers and new staff got their first taste of Marist culture by being invited to kiss the "M," submerging themselves in the cold fountain to kiss the yellow tiled "M," before emerging as new members of the Marist family.

While some freshmen felt nervous, others experienced excitement before the event, wondering what they would be dressed as. Josiah Jarvis felt both.

Freshmen student Jackson Anderson, dressed as "Harry," from the movie Dum and Dummer, was excited to finally become a Spartan. "Because it's like a step of initiation for Marist," Anderson said.

Freshmen Xochi Cuadros, Greenley Robinson and Avery Carlin agreed that after emerging from the fountain they instantly felt like a part of the community.

This year a few new rules were implemented. Costumes were not allowed to discriminate against gender, race, ability or sexual orientation. Because of this, male students were no longer allowed to dress as females or princesses.

The rule changes were put into effect to keep the tradition safe and to mirror Marist's Catholic school values.

The first week of the new block schedule concluded on Friday with the students and staff gathering for the traditional Mass of the Holy Spirit to ask for the Spirit's blessing on the school year and on the Class of 2020.
